Biographie de l'auteur
Jerome Parisse was born in France, where he developed a love for language, literature and good food. In his early thirties, he moved to Australia where he is now based. Jerome has always been interested in the world of theatre. He studied acting in Sydney and Paris and has performed in Australia and in France. Jerome is also a successful playwright, having had many plays produced in Australia, America, Malaysia, and Singapore. His latest play, Love and Light, has been produced seven times and performed more than forty times in four countries. Jerome can speak several languages, including Australian Sign Language, in which he performs on a regular basis. He is deeply involved with the deaf community in Sydney. One of his plays, My Sisters Choice, was written for both hearing and deaf audiences and involves spoken English and Sign Language. Jerome writes the kind of stories he enjoys reading, fast paced adventures in which his characters struggle with identity, feelings and difficult choices. He writes in English and in French.
